Anvil: The Story of Anvil is a 2008 documentary film about the Canadian heavy metal band Anvil. The film follows the band over the course of several years as they struggle to achieve success in the music industry.

Anvil was formed in 1978 in Toronto, Canada. The band consists of lead vocalist and guitarist Steve "Lips" Kudlow and drummer Robb Reiner. Anvil released their debut album, Hard 'n' Heavy, in 1981. The album was a critical and commercial failure, and Anvil was dropped by their record label. The band continued to release albums throughout the 1980s and 1990s, but they never achieved mainstream success.

In 2006, Anvil was approached by filmmaker Sacha Gervasi about making a documentary about the band. Gervasi had been a fan of Anvil since the early 1980s, and he was fascinated by their story of perseverance and determination. Gervasi agreed to make the film, and Anvil: The Story of Anvil was released in 2008.

The film was a critical and commercial success. It won numerous awards, including the Audience Award at the Sundance Film Festival. Anvil: The Story of Anvil has been praised for its honest and inspiring portrayal of the band's struggle.
